EMS Angels MC PA Chapter 13

The Sensual Biker

Often times I am asked about riding. What's so great about riding? Why ride several thousand miles instead of trailering the bike? There's a patch on the back of one of my leather motorcycle jackets that reads, "If I have to Explain, you wouldn't understand", but try to explain I will

For me it boils down to this: I am a sensual person and riding is always a sensual experience. I'm not talking about in a sexual way, I'll let you discuss that one amongst yourselves. I am talking about the way riding affects

All my senses in ways I just don't experience in a car.

Everyone knows there are five basic senses: Touch, smell, hearing, sight and taste.

When I am encapsulated in a car I am deprived of the outside world for the most part. Crank up the AC for some canned air, hit the button for some music and away I go. Sure, I can roll down the window for some fresh air, or have a sunroof to see the sky but it is still a sensually limited experience.

On a motorcycle I am at one with the world around me. I experience it and it experiences me. My senses are heightened and enjoyed each and every time I ride, whether it is just around town or across country. Good or bad, riding makes it an experience, whereas driving just makes it a trip.

Being insulated in a car I've never felt the temperature change by mere degrees going up or down an incline or smelled a stream long before I crossed it. In a car I've never heard sparrows squawking at a hawk to keep them away from their nest or been able to look up to see an eagle keeping pace with me. I've certainly never tasted a Monarch butterfly in a car. On a bike I've experienced all of this and so much more.

When I am riding all my senses, not just the basic five, seem to go into overdrive in a way people who don't ride can't begin to understand. I know, at this point you're thinking, "Wait a minute, everyone knows there are only five senses." But I assure you there are many more.

Riding has awakened my... sense of freedom ... sense of satisfaction... sense of peace sense of Independence .." sense of belonging sense of power ... sense of awe ... sense of adventure ... sense of humor.... sense of wonder... sense of excitement.," sense of fear... sense of humility ... sense of self ... Sense of family ... sense of camaraderie ... sense of nervousness ,, sense of longing ,, sense of discovery ... sense of pride ,, Sense of well being ... sense of humanity ... sense of anticipation ... sense of coordination ... sense of decency ,, sense of spirituality

I could go on and on with the senses I've discovered while riding, but I suggest you go ride and discover your own sensuality. ~ Author Unknown
